I am a first-year student Bachelor of Science in Information Technology with the most prior experience in social communication, teamwork, and social interaction.

I am well-mannered, versatile, and enjoy editing and playing online games.

EXPERIENCE

In terms of learning, doing research, and enjoying myself, I had a pretty fantastic experience. Such an experience is entirely dependent on the workplace environment in which you are employed, and in my opinion, the workplace environment is generated by those who surround you rather than just by the amenities offered by your company. If everything is going so well, one could question why people don't stay. A painful truth is that, depending on their level of comfort, workers in the IT business may or may not move forward to seize new chances.
